

La Boop's
French, from Marseille,

Welcome to all who question themselves or others through images.

I have always been moved by photography, be it that of masters or of unknown people, but I had never thought of using this magic eye to capture a moment.

One day in 2014 life made me look at myself in a different way , not posing but caught at a random moment

The women, places and moments I decided to photograph are all of that.

Imperfect, real, alive.

www.laboops.com

A ma fenêtre

Exhibition from the 16th of June to the 9th of October 2016 at the Hotel Pavillon des Lettres.

It is rare to find places where you can let go. Take Time. For yourself.

Places where a woman can dream wide awake, stretch or contemplate.

I caught these precious fragments from my window.

In that shady place where daylight peeps in, my guests were free to look outside or simply look into their souls.

Shot at the Pavillon des Lettres:

Shot at the Pavillon des Lettres:

